The week in review

Murderer Gets Married

The PA newspaper Al-Ayam reports that Hamdi Kura'an, who murdered Tourism Minister Rehavam Ze'evi in Oct. 2001, was recently married while being held in detention in Jericho.

Kura'an, together with four other terrorists involved in the murder, has been held in a PA installation in Jericho, in accordance with the terms of an agreement with Israel. Kura'an, the man who actually pulled the trigger, is married to his cousin, who said that she is "proud of him and his actions." MK Benny Elon, who took over the leadership of the Moledet party after Ze'evi's death, said today in response, "There is no limit to the immorality. Gandhi's murderer gets married in a PA convalescent home, while Israel, instead of killing him, transfers a monthly payment of 130 million shekels to Arafat and his henchmen."

Child Terrorist

Two Arab terrorist youths aged 14 and 15, were killed by IDF troops Thursday, as they ran suspiciously toward a convoy of Israeli vehicles near Netzarim, a town in Gaza. IDF troops saw that the youths were armed, opened fire and killed the two before a catastrophic attack could occur. IDF sources said the two young terrorists were armed with rifles and grenades. The attempted attack occurred shortly after an anti-tank missile was fired at the bus. No injuries were reported in that incident.

Also in Gaza, IDF armored tractors destroyed a road in the PA-controlled town, that has served as a base for the firing of mortars and Kassam missiles against Israeli towns and villages in Gaza and the Negev. The destruction of the road was a direct response to the three Kassam rockets fired into the Negev city of Sderot.

A force of D-9 tractors, accompanied by IDF troops, entered the Gaza area via the Erez checkpoint. IDF troops blocked the Beit Hanoun intersection as the tractors plowed an enormous ditch, about the width of the road itself, ensuring that the road stays blocked until further notice.

PEOPLE of the BOOK

Camp David Accords Part VI

Begin, by contrast, needed nothing. There was nothing substantial that Sadat was prepared to give, and within Israel, the fact that he was the prime minister who had brought Sadat to Jerusalem had bolstered his position immensely. Unquestionably, Sadat was going to make demands, and the Americans may have supported him initially, but Begin held all these cards in his hand; there was no reason for him to give in. And yet he made concession after concession, giving away (and even volunteering) security and economic assets without getting anything in return. This was unnecessary. He could have come away with a treaty without making any substantial concessions. Is this mere conjecture? Not at all, because on one of the most sensitive points of all the negotiations, Begin stood his ground, and Sadat conceded. Sadat had demanded that Begin make concessions with regard to Jerusalem. On this point Begin stood firm and said, "No."

Now Jerusalem has sentimental value to the Arabs. A pledge from Begin on an altered status for Jerusalem would have been very flattering to Sadat's image. But when Begin stood firm, the matter was erased from the agenda.

STUFF you should know

Education PA Style

Before shutting the doors of three Palestinian colleges, that openly encouraged terrorism, the IDF ordnance units collected materials found inside.

In the main office, soldiers found a variety of incitement paraphernalia, including banners, posters, flags, CD's, tapes and children's notebooks depicting faces of suicide bombers "martyrs" on the cover. Some notebooks depicted the "Martyrs tree", something which looks like an enormous family tree, but with the faces of all the "martyrs" on it.

Classrooms were filled to the brim with posters that praised suicide "The Jihad is our path" proclaimed one, whilst another announced, "Sharon and Bush are pigs". Yet another poster declared "The glory of the Martyrs".

When soldiers entered the second floor classrooms, they found boxes filled with folders on who's covers were pictures of the September 11th terror attacks next to pictures of armed Palestinians.

In ensuing searches, soldiers discovered that not only did the college distribute incitement materials, but had also incorporated it into the curriculum. Notebooks and textbooks with the Hamas symbols and slogans supporting acts of terrorism against Israel were found.

Noble Death

"I shall carry my soul in my palm...I see my death, but I hasten my steps towards it...Hearing [weapons'] clash is pleasant to my ear And the flow of blood gladdens my soul...By your life! This is the death of Men And who asks for a noble death here it is" Appears in a 7th-grade PA schoolbook
