The week in review

Rudy Supports Israel

Close to 100,000 people gathered in Zion Square in Jerusalem Monday night to demand that Israel expel Arafat and fight the terrorism-sponsoring Palestinian Authority. Among the speakers was New York Mayor Rudolph Giuliani, who addressed the crowd by phone and said,

"Mayor Olmert, and all of my friends in Israel: I am very confident that together we are going to overcome terrorism, we are going to prevail, because our values are the correct ones. We believe in democracy, we believe in the rule of law, in the respect for human life and human dignity, and these are the values that our enemies are attempting to suppress. If those ideas are allowed to grow in the places they oppress, then they're going to be overthrown.

So, we're together, we're very, very good friends, and we have exactly the same values that we're seeking to defend and perpetuate... We are closer than ever before."

Why Won't We Say What the Emperor is [Not] Wearing? Part III

After the Six-Day War there was a real fear of Israel and her army within the Arab world. Today, sadly, that is no longer true. Why? Because of our concessions, because of our inability to stand up and claim what is rightfully ours, they perceive us as weak. And a weak enemy invites aggressiveness.

The same applies with regard to Israel's relations with America. If Israel will not stand up for her priorities, can one expect America to fight for them? If Israel will not protest the constant Arab violation of agreements, why should America be concerned with them?

Even when we need help from other nations, we need not cower before them in fear. America considers foreign aid as an investment. And every investor will be more impressed with a prospective partner who - though not boastful or arrogant - knows what he needs and wants and is forthright in seeking it.

One More Shot

Yesha Council leaders called on Prime Minister Ariel Sharon to keep his word and order IDF forces to once again move onto Givat HaShalhevet (Abu Sneineh Hill) in Chevron, following the Wednesday shooting attack.

Mr. Sharon stated, when ordering the October 15th withdrawal of forces from the hilltop, that the IDF would retake the hill immediately if a single shot was fired.

Looking For A New Home

In light of the arrest of an Arab from the PA, who had returned from studies in Pakistan, on suspicion of affiliation with Osama Bin Laden's terrorist network, the Defense Minister, stated today that Bin-Laden is most likely continuing attempts to establish cells in Israel. "We should not be surprised..." said the Minister, "but the citizenry should know that we are ten times more prepared [for him] than anyone else."

The Capital Under Fire

Another first for Palestinian terrorism: Arabs shot Wednesday night at a private home in Jerusalem's Givat Hananiah neighborhood, north of Talpiot. .

STUFF you should know

Americans Support Israel

In the most comprehensive survey of American attitudes towards Israel conducted since the terrorist attacks in New York and Washington on September 11, nearly three quarters of those surveyed expressed strong support for Israel and its struggle against terrorism.

The Jerusalem Post poll, co-sponsored by The Chicago Sun-Times, was conducted last week. When asked whether the United States should continue to support Israel, nearly three-fourths (73%) of Americans said yes, 15% said no, and 12% were either undecided or refused to answer.

The Jerusalem Post/ Chicago Sun-Times poll found that, 56% view Israel favorably, including 24% who view Israel very favorably. Conversely, only 19% view Israel unfavorably and only 6% view Israel very unfavorably. The remaining 24% of respondents either had no opinion or refused to answer.

When asked whether they believe that the Arab World "sincerely accepts Israel's right to exist" or whether they believe the Arab World "seeks the eventual destruction of Israel," nearly two thirds of Americans (62%) believe that the Arabs seek Israel's destruction and only 15% of Americans think the Arab world sincerely accepts Israel's right to exist.
