News and the Jews

The week in review

Streets Soaked In Blood

Thursday, five Israelis were murdered when an Arab suicide bomber detonated his explosives aboard a public bus in the heart of Tel Aviv. Everyone on the bus and in its vicinity - Allenby and Rothschild Streets - was hurt or killed; over 50 people were treated in nearby hospitals, including one with life-threatening injuries and another eight with serious wounds.

The bus was heading north when it exploded just meters away from Tel Aviv's Great Synagogue during the busy lunch hour. The bus was reduced to a heap of charred metal, and some passengers were thrown out through a large hole created by the explosion. Others got out on their own through windows and doors. Eyewitnesses were horrified to observe chunks of human flesh spread all over the ground in the vicinity of the doomed bus.

Yossi Landau, a volunteer for the emergency medical and burial organization known as Zaka, said today that the Allenby attack was especially grave, as the bomb contained an enormous amount of nails and screws that greatly compound the injuries caused by the explosion. He said that bodily remains were spread out over a very large radius.

Praising Fatah

Foreign Minister Shimon Peres used his address to the United Nations General Assembly yesterday to applaud Yasser Arafat's Fatah terror organization. Peres praised Fatah's recent call to establish an independent "State of Palestine" based on democratic principles with respect for human rights, civil liberties and a market economy. Peres said, "We look upon these words as a first dawn of a different season. We hope it is spring."

Hero Saves Many

Wednesday, a suicide terrorist blew himself up as police approached him. The blast wounded three people, including a policeman who died of his wounds shortly afterwards, and a police vehicle was heavily damaged. An eyewitness named Ziyad said the explosion occurred as the policeman approached two Arabs at a bus stop. Police now assume that the dead officer was in effect a hero, in that his alertness prevented the bomber from blowing himself up inside a public bus in accordance with his plans.

PEOPLE of the BOOK

Practically What To Do Now Part II

Unquestionably, there will be protests at the outset. They must be met with resolution. When this is done, the Arabs and the other nations will ultimately realize the reality: Israel is serious about defending her self-interest; this land will not be given away.

For this purpose, it is important that new settlement be broad in scope. The same clamor will be raised by the Arabs whether a new home is added to an existing settlement, one new settlement is founded, or the entire land is settled. So why hold back?

Indeed, restrictions against settlement invite protest. For it becomes obvious that restrictions are imposed only because in essence there are Israeli's who feel that they don't really belong there. Settling the land without restriction, by contrast, broadcasts a message of confident self-esteem. It shows the entire world that Israel is doing everything possible to maintain her security and will not be halted in that endeavor.

STUFF you should know

Saudi Blood Libel

The Arab propaganda machine continues to spew blood libels against world Jewry. In a recent article published in the official Saudi daily newspaper Al-Jazira, columnist Dr. Muhammad bin S'ad Al-Shwey'ir accuses Jews of using human blood for holiday celebrations. Excerpts from the column:

"Christian Europe showed enmity toward the Jews when it transpired that their rabbis craftily hunt anyone walking alone, [tempting] him to enter their house of worship. Then they take his blood to use for baked goods for their holidays, as part of their ritual. Often this deed was uncovered. When these incidents proliferated, the security apparatuses began to follow them, until they caught their rabbis committing the crime. The 24th protocol [of the anti-Semitic book "Protocols of the Elders of Zion," which claims that the Jewish people secretly strive for world conquest] represents the goal towards which the Jews strive with their tactics, their false media, and their treachery. The free world must take notice... where the intentions of the Jews have been revealed as they gnaw away at the societies like the worm gnaws away at the wood until it is entirely consumed before signs [of the damage are visible]. [The West and America] must awaken, and must support the Muslims against [the Jews] before it is too late."

Surrender To Terror

"If an evacuation would take place under terrorism and violence, this would represent a great blow at Israel's security. It would be perceived as an Israeli surrender to terrorism"

IDF Chief of Staff Moshe Yaalon, Sep 15 2002
